

Much like carpooling to work, vanpooling on a daily basis can reduce the stress levels of individual employees by taking individuals out of traffic when commuting to work. In turn those individuals will also be able to save money by having less wear and tear on their personal vehicle while ostensibly improving our air quality by reducing the number of vehicles on our roadways. The effects of vanpooling are amplified because of the increased capacity for individuals in a vanpool. Individual employers are also able to receive tax benefits.

